Alexandra Lomeiko

Alexandra Lomeiko was born in 1991 in Christchurch, New Zealand and started learning to play the violin at age five. She received many awards and prizes around New Zealand including the Most Promising Award at the Young Performer of the Year competition. In 2005, Alexandra was the youngest performer at the Pablo Casals Festival which led to her being invited to join the Russian Virtuosi of Europe Ensemble with whom she regularly collaborates to this day.

During her time in London, she also performed as a soloist and chamber musician in many prestigious venues including, LSO St. Luke's, Queen Elizabeth Hall, Barbican and Wigmore Hall. She has also been broadcast on BBC Radio 3 on numerous occasions. She won the Purcell Concerto Competition (2008), the Orpheus Chamber Music Competition (2007) and was awarded the special "Audience Prize" at the International Canetti Violin Competition in Israel (2010) and the "Best String Player Award" at the Gisborne International Music Competition (2012).

Alexandra is also a very avid chamber musician and is a founding member of the Al-luto Trio, Portobello Duo and Lumos Quartet all of which she regularly performs with across the U.K and abroad. Most recently, Alexandra and her colleague Luba Tunnicliffe formed a self-directed string orchestra known as The Silk Street Sinfonia which is scheduled for many upcoming performances throughout Europe.

In 2010, she was awarded "The Henry Weinreb Award" scholarship by the Guildhall School of Music and Drama (London) and studied there with Professor David Takeno, whom she found immensely inspiring and is the greatest influence on her career so far.

Following her graduation in 2014, she commenced her postgraduate studies at The Royal College of Music with Yuri Zhislin. She is an RCM Lark Scholar supported by a Leverhulme Postgraduate Studentship and also by an award from the Countess of Munster Trust.

Her favourite piece of music is Prokofiev's Romeo and Juliet Ballet Suite, and her favourite composers are Tchaikovsky and Brahms, but she also loves Mozart and Bach and is very fond of 20th century Russian composers Prokofiev and Shostakovich.

Her favourite performers are David Oistrakh, Janine Jansen, Maxim Vengerov, Itzhak Perlman and Arthur Grumiaux.

Alexandra plays on a violin made by Carlo Tononi, Cremona 1687, and gratefully acknowledges its loan from the Royal College of Music, London.
